CARTE POSTALE.

All Souls' College and Bodleian Camera. All Souls' was founded in 1437 by Archbishop Chichele, who himself had risen from humble rustic life through Oxford tuition to high position in Church and State, and might indeed have been a Cardinal. Amply he repaid the debt with this noble college. Its chapel is noteworthy for its majestic reredos, perhaps the finest in England, though hidden away for over a century, until restored to something of its pristine splendour. The Camera is the old Radcliffe Library, founded in 1737 by the Court Physician of that name; now the reading room of the world-famous Bodleian Library.
